The Safe and The Sacred

"Thank you so much for holding this safe and sacred space for us to do this work." This was the compliment that came as a recent guest was leaving a retreat on dismantling racism. The compliment is akin to many others that have been offered as retreats here come to a close. However, this compliment seemed more impactful than usual. It could have been the intonation of speech, the degree of sincerity in which it was offered, or even that it came from a longtime acquaintance and facilitator of difficult conversations. Her use of the cumulative adjectives, safe and sacred, is what has continued to stay with me most. There is no doubt that her compliment was meant to honor the work, prayers and presence of all who live, work and volunteer here. Nevertheless, I took it personal as I felt my heart warmed by the sharing and the affirming of our intention to hold safe space for difficult conversations.

Early in my years of training and practice as a spiritual director and healing prayer minister, I became fully aware of the difficulty I would experience in holding safe space for others. I would so easily revert to my very human tendency to want to fix, give advice, or judge. Yet, I kept at this practice of holding safe space because I believe – no, I know - that it is crucial to meaningful living. I know because there are people in my life that I trust to hold space for me. They are those who have spent years supporting me in my own growth and transformation; and have walked with me as scales fell from my eyes. These are people who have made no attempt to take away my personal power or agency by trying to fix me, shame me or overwhelm me. They make up a team of people who have prayed for me, loved me and reminded me of who I am. Today, as I consider this great gift, there is no doubt that they were willing to lovingly and prayerfully set aside their own thoughts and preferences so I could make my own choices - even when some were not in my best interest.

My own years of being nurtured by and practicing spiritual disciplines that require one to hold safe space for others have taught me that, like the cumulative adjectives, holding safe space involves double duty. On one hand it’s about honoring and validating someone else in whatever state they are in while being present to your own—not an easy practice. On the other hand, it begs the consideration of the manner in which we honor and validate one another. Surely, making a space sacred is not our own doing. Any space has the potential to become sacred. We don’t always know what the full makeup of the space could be. We only know that the place, the people and the philosophies, the love and trust they bring to it all make up that container, and ultimately contributes to the sacredness of its content. Sacred spaces become so when those present experience the space as holy and worthy of awe and respect.

In considering all of this, there is the possibility that the guest who complimented us that day was unaware of her own contribution to the sacredness of the space. Perhaps she was unaware of the great gift she must have given to others in choosing to hope and devote herself to goodness in the space they held. No doubt, she and others were willing...

Reconstructing the Gospel

The chairs in the West Room were pushed against the wall so all of us could fit in a circle. Jonathan wanted us to be able to see each other and be on one level together. The Presbytery of the James’ Dismantling Racism Ministries recently brought Jonathan Wilson-Hartgrove, graduate of Duke Divinity School and celebrated writer and activist, to Richmond Hill. Jonathan lives in an intentional community in Durham where he teaches, writes and directs the School for Conversion, a nonprofit that pursues beloved community.

Jonathan came to share insights from his new book, Reconstructing the Gospel: Finding Freedom from Slave Holder Religion. Growing up a faithful Southern Baptist, Jonathan gradually came to realize that the gospel his Christianity proclaimed was not good news for everybody. The same Christianity that sang “Amazing grace, how sweet the sound” also perpetuated racial injustice and white supremacy in the name of Jesus.

“I wrote Reconstructing the Gospel because I really want to help people see that in the history of Christianity in America there is a way of being Christian that justified race-based chattel slavery, and that is deeply influential especially on religion and public life in America... In many ways that kind of Christianity is with us still. Reconstructing the Gospel is about how to find freedom from that kind of slaveholder religion and how to discover that there is another kind of Christianity that has been with us all along that offers good news for not only the people who are a part of it, but good news for the whole world.”

He referenced Ephesians 2:14, “in Christ we are made one, the dividing wall of hostility between us has been brought down.” For too long and in too many cases, the Bible has been misread to legally and religiously justify racial division. “We have to admit,” Jonathan said, “that we can know something and know it wrongly.”

Reconstructing the Gospel means affirming again that drawing close to God requires that we draw near to one another in healing ways. Such is the work of Richmond Hill. Just as Reconstruction after the Civil War intended to repair a desperately broken society, it’s time for a spiritual reconstruction that undoes the injustices of the past so that freedom rings today and in the future for both individuals and society as a whole.

Tending the Spirit

to sit with one another in whatever manner needed without judging or making one another feel inept. No doubt, she did not try to fix anyone or forge particular outcomes. No doubt, the safety and sacredness of the space grew as hearts were opened, unconditional support expressed and egos remained parked.

I would surmise to say that a lot of holding safe space is going on when sacredness is experienced. And, seldom do we hold space for others without discovering that someone is holding space for us. As a matter of fact, it is virtually impossible to be a strong holder of safe space unless we have others who will hold space for us. Even the strongest of leaders and the most skilled of facilitators need to know that there are people with whom they can be vulnerable and weak without fear of being judged.

And, it’s not something that’s exclusively done by trained professionals or caregivers. It is something that all of us can do for each other – for our partners, our children, our friends, neighbors, and even strangers who cross our paths.

This complex practice, unique to each person, group and situation, may not be one that is easy to master, if ever. However, it is certainly a practice to learn and use as we are faced with increasingly more challenging conversations each and every day—we need the sacred.

PRAYING WITH THE SONGS OF TAIZÉ
First Tuesdays at 7:30 p.m. * (No Taizé service January 1, 2019)
Jim Bennett, Leader
Taizé worship is contemplative and meditative in character, using short songs, repeated again and again in a candlelit chapel. The songs express a basic reality of faith, quickly grasped by the heart. The hope is this reality will gradually penetrate one's whole being; thus the meditative singing becomes a way of listening to God. Our practice of Taizé includes singing, prayer for Metropolitan Richmond, and a period of silence. Jim Bennett, a skilled musician, leads this time of worship with a variety of guest musicians and instruments.

SOAKING PRAYER SERVICE
Deborah Cannady, Leader
1st Thursdays at 10:00 a.m. and 4th Tuesdays at 7:30 p.m.
Those struggling with illness have benefitted from being “soaked in prayer” over periods of time. Prayer ministers are available to pray with those desiring emotional, spiritual, or physical healing. Participants are invited to find a comfortable place, sit, relax, and receive prayer. Participants may also come and go during the service.

GENERATIONAL HEALING SERVICE
5th Tuesdays at 7:30 p.m.
Rev. Dr. Paula O. Parker, Leader
Once a quarter, Richmond Hill offers a service for Generational Healing. This is an opportunity to invite God’s healing into your family, including generations that have gone before, as well as generations that will come after you. Participants are encouraged to bring the blessings as well as the pains and traumas of their ancestry written on a piece of paper (not to be shared). However, careful preparation of your personal genogram will help you pray more specifically for your family members.

MEN’S CIRCLE: PRACTICING THE WAY OF COUNCIL
2nd Thursdays, 7:30 p.m. - 9:00 p.m.
Rev. Joel Blunk, Leader
Men of all ages and stages of life are invited to participate in this monthly gathering at Richmond Hill to practice The Way of Council, an ancient spiritual practice of storytelling and deep conversation. The process is simple. Plenty of silence creates spaciousness for meaning—both spoken and unspoken—to be offered and received. We hold the space with intention. The time is closed with a prayer, a group gesture or a few moments more of silence.

Micah Holds Open Space Event
Last November, the Micah Association held an Open Space Event for Micah key coordinators representing faith communities from all over the city, at Richmond Hill. Our morning began in the chapel with music and singing accompanied by Richmond Hill’s Director of Music, Jim Bennett; greetings and prayers from Rev. Janie Walker and Rev. Joel Blunk, Richmond Hill’s Co-Pastoral Directors, and Rev. Vicky Bethel, Micah Coordinator; followed by poetry readings and testimonies to the importance of quality and equity in education provided by two of Richmond Hill’s urban service corps interns, Hoonie Kwon and Jabriel Hasan.

After this time of celebration, we moved to the Adams-Taylor House, where we engaged in a process known as “open space,” in which meeting attendees selected discussion topics and formed their own small groups, based on the overarching question: “The unique role of Micah: how can our partnership of faith communities continue to make an impact?”

Lively discussions took place in rooms all over the Richmond Hill facility, with small groups reporting back to the larger group at the end of the morning. Topics included possibilities for parental and family engagement; how Micah connects and interacts with Communities in Schools (CIS), Richmond Public Schools, and other Richmond education-related partners; volunteer recruitment and increasing opportunities for service; increased collaboration between Micah and other community groups and between faith partners serving the same schools; and how to provide effective communication between Micah staff and advisory council, Micah faith community partners, and the schools.

Feedback from the participants was positive and enthusiastic. A summary of the discussion group conversations was sent by email to all of the meeting participants and to all Micah key coordinators, as well as to the seven members of the new Micah Advisory Council. This council has been meeting monthly since September 2018 to discuss and discern future structure, direction, and goals of Micah. The summary report from this Open Space event will be central to the council’s deliberations and recommendations as it continues its work through the 2018-2019 school year.

Cultivating THE TRUE SEED within

2019 Summer Institute

Adult Faith Formation & Holy Becoming / Cultivating the True Seed Within

We are to grow up in every way...into Christ. – Eph. 4:15

Meister Eckhart identified the “true seed” as the living presence of God’s image implanted in the human soul. He went on to suggest that if the seed of divine nature in each of us were to have a “good, wise and industrious cultivator” we would thrive and grow up into our truest nature – the God-image or True Self.

At the 2019 Summer Institute we will explore the process of authentic and whole adult faith formation. Time together will include small group discussion, solitude in nature, storytelling and artistic expression.

Come ready to explore
- A nature-based model of human development and personal growth
- Second half of life spirituality
- A deeper understanding of True Self/false self
- Age and stage appropriate tasks
- Common life-stage themes and patterns of human evolution
